

MAY 22 – JUNE 16 2023

ILLINOIS STATE UNIVERSITY

FIELD SCHOOL IN

ARCHAEOLOGY (ANT 381)

The 2023 field season will focus on Noble-Wieting, a 14th century Langford village north of Heyworth, IL (Transportation provided to and from ISU campus). Our goals during this year include investigating subsurface architectural remains to examine the process of community formation at the site. Students receive training and hands-on experience in all areas of archaeological excavation and documentation.

COSTS: Tuition: ISU students: your current rate for 3 or 6 semester credits, Plus Field School Fee: $100

SPACE IS LIMITED: To apply, please email a one-page letter describing why you are interested in attending the archaeological field school to glmill1@ilstu.edu. In addition to the letter of interest, please include your year in school, related courses taken, phone number, and email address. The priority application deadline is Monday, March 1. Anthropology majors can apply for the Martin Nickels Field School Scholarship in Spring 2023.
