

Illinois State University Field School in Archaeology (ANT 381)
May 20 – June 14, 2024
Monday-Friday 9am-4pm

The 2024 field season will focus on Noble-Wieting, a 14th century Langford village near Heyworth, IL (Transportation provided to and from ISU campus). Our goals during this year include investigating subsurface architectural remains to examine the process of community formation at the site. Students receive daily hands-on experience in all areas of archaeological excavation and documentation.

COSTS: Tuition for 6 credits (can also be taken for 3 credits as a cost saving strategy)

Additional Field School Fee: $100

SPACE IS LIMITED, APPLY IN ADVANCE: To apply, please email a one-page letter describing why you are interested in attending the archaeological field school to glmill1@ilstu.edu. In addition to the letter of interest, please include your year in school, related courses taken, phone number, and email address. The priority application deadline is Thursday Feb 29. Anthropology majors can apply for the Martin Nickels Field School Scholarship in Spring 2024.
